These are the stories unavailable for some years and still amazingly fresh and arresting that influenced a whole generation of short story writers. Not one of whom capped O'Hara's mastery of the genre. The selection includes the Pennsylvania stories which describe the men and women in the countryside where O'Hara grew up, the Hollywood stories that show that fabled land in the years of its greatest glory when O'Hara was working there as a screenwriter, and the New York stories which come from the days when O'Hara was a familiar figure in Café Society. This important gathering of previously uncollected and unpublished material enlarges the assessment of O'Hara as a craftsman and a conscious literary artist. O'Hara's preoccupation with the craft of writing is superbly revealed in the series of lectures he gave on the American novel at Rider College in Trenton, N.J. These hitherto unpublished lectures contain major critical statements about the techniques of fiction writing O'Hara had intended to publish. These lectures, because of their importance but he never did today, they are of particular value in illuminating the thought of this eminent author because O'Hara developed them in close reference to his own work and because they were written in 1959 and 1961 when he was at the peak of his writing career. The 38 other pieces include the never published foreword O'Hara wrote for the Selected Stories of John O'Hara. There are also three pieces on F. Scott Fitzgerald which reveal much about Fitzgerald and his writings. Other reviews and interviews show the high regard O'Hara had for his fellow writers Faulkner, Hemingway, and Thornton Wilder. Like all good writing about writing, the material stimulates the reader to read or reread Appointment in Samarra, Rage to Live, Ten North Frederick, From the Terrace, Butterfield 8, and the collected short stories of this superb storyteller.

These are refreshingly frank, sparsely written stories that expose the world of bartenders and b-girls, car washers and criminals. John O'Hara dissects the subtleties that bind humans together and the pressures that separate them.
